

Aileen's Vivid Vision (2015)

I envision my life at 28 to be clear, focused, and fun. My dreams of becoming an influential media personality are a reality. I'm so happy and healthy. My body is so fit and I am glowing; I have abs and nice legs. My living space is clean, beautifully designed, and filled only with things I love.

I've mastered the skills of patience, perseverance, commitment, and taking small positive steps up the slight edge. I am a pro. Going pro and behaving like the best has catapulted my life in an amazing success trajectory. I am the captain of my fate, the master of my soul. I am thrilled to be living.

I absolutely love my life. I do what I love and I'm fulfilled and joyful in my career. First, I am consistently sharing my light, empowering young people through my YouTube and blog. I've built a strong community based on trust and love. I have over 1 Million subscribers and growing. I genuinely want to see all my loves do well and thrive in life. As I am learning and growing on my channel, my audience is learning and growing with me. YouTube allows me to have a steady flow of income of over $150K each year, so that I can be creative in other areas of life.

I am an artist. I've grown as a writer, producer, and singer. I am not afraid anymore, my talent can shine bright—I have a strong ear and a talent for music. I work with many producers and labels in the music industry, and together we create fresh, beautiful, dope, meaningful music. Music is my art and singing & writing is my joy. I'm grateful to get to explore my creativity and do what I love.

I'm frequently traveling for work, for fun, and to volunteer. I've made friends in every corner of the world and each trip, each experience, is magical. Travel is my opportunity to experience the magic and serendipity in this world. I love to expand my view of people, culture, and the beauty of our world.

My homebase is my clean apartment in LA. I keep it minimal because it makes me feel fresh and focused, and I'm always on the go anyway. I frequently spend quality time with mom and Elvis. I'm so proud of both of them. They are doing so well and shining brighter than ever. I love them so much.

I have the best support system. My relationship with my friends and family is stronger than ever. I've learned to give more love, and so I receive more love. There is an abundance of love all around. I take myself less seriously, so I have much more fun with people and in life. I've made amazing friends who are all making waves in their own corners of the world. We all support each other and enjoy this journey together. Together, we are invincible.

On my free time, I enjoy writing, meditating, doing yoga, painting, or exploring my neighborhood and visiting art galleries and museums. Sometimes I like to slow down to remind myself to appreciate each moment in life, and to reflect on how amazing and wonderful my life is.

I am feeling the growth; I am a better artist than ever and I am having so much fun doing all I do in life. I know that as long as I am joyful and loving every day, I am fulfilling my life's purpose here on earth.

So far, my life has already exceeded my wildest expectations. And I'm so incredibly grateful for it all.
